

A bit about me

I'm working in IT from quite some time, i've covered different roles from coder thru team manager till customers care, even sometimes exploring new technologies, all my professional work life is in the financial banking sector, so i don't do business with Joomla.

I'm a volunteer in the Joomla community, since Mambo time, i've served like a forum moderator, like a mentor for the GSoC program, as a code contributor and currently i'm in the Bug Squad Team.

Why I'm bad for the role

I'm often not politically correct, I always express my ideas, and I don't care if they are popular or not.

I'm Italian, so may I have some too much passionate way to discuss the ideas, and an international community may have difficulties to understand what it is behind the formal expression, not to mention that my english skill are quite far to be perfect.

I'll not support the President if i don't share the same ideas.

I'll resign if i'll be elected running against only Mr. / Mrs. "None of the above"

What you want to achieve in the role

Demonstrate that if you really want that some changes happens, the only way to achieve your goal it is from inside.

Switch the main focus from Community to the Product (the software)

Get new blood (contributors) from:

- School
- University
- End user that are outside from silos
- 3rd developers
- Intergrators
- Web hosting

In short create a room where every player can have the opportunity to share their thinkings, and hopefully that these opinion will be take in account seriously.
